General information

The University of Law (incorporating The College of Law) is the UK's longest-established provider of legal education, dating back to 1876 and has trained more lawyers than anyone else.

The University of Law works with 90 of the top 100 law firms and is firmly focussed on delivering the best employability results for its students. The University has 9 fully resourced, modern campuses in Birmingham, Bristol, Chester, Guildford, Leeds, London (Bloomsbury and Moorgate), Manchester and Nottingham and offers a variety of full time, part time and online courses. The University also offers programmes through campuses within the University of Exeter, University of East Anglia, University of Liverpool and University of Reading.

University of Law's teaching and learning model

Our unique teaching and learning model ensures integration of key skills and competencies, essential for employability, into the course content. This helps students relate what they have learnt in to what is expected of them in business.

All our courses are designed by experienced, qualified lawyers from practice. As well as unrivalled levels of face-to-face tuition, we employ a wide variety of interactive online learning media in order to enrich and vary the learning experience.

Our LPC

Our LPC not only satisfies all SRA requirements but also includes the option of an MSc in Law, Business and Management. Students can expect:

- A Client-focus and embedded business skills to enable them to deliver commercially focused advice
- To develop essential professional skills ranging from oral and written communication, through to meeting skills and project and risk management
- A wide selection of electives to cover specialist areas of interest
- Expert teaching by qualified solicitors and barristers in addition to talks from our external faculty of Visiting Professors

When students enrol on our LPC, they will choose from one of the following three options:

- MSc in Law, Business and Management - the core LPC with a Masters in Law, Business and Management
- LPC LLM in Professional Legal Practice - the core LPC with a Masters in Law
- LPC – the core LPC, enabling to you practice law as a fully qualified solicitor
