Reasons/basis

On 6 December 2023 Ms McCusker pleaded guilty to and was convicted of two counts of wilfully pretending to be a solicitor pursuant to section 21. Those two counts related to the hearings on 20 and 27 April 2023. Ms McCusker was conditionally discharged for two years, fined £276 and ordered to pay costs of £250 and a victim surcharge of £26.

The repeated nature of the conduct and the lack of insight in this case give rise to a risk of repetition and that risk is heightened by the fact that Ms McCusker continues to work in a legal practice. Working only in an approved employment will enable us to ensure that the prospective employer is aware of Ms McCusker's conviction and the conduct that led to those convictions and puts measures in place to mitigate the risks presented.

Although there are no specific allegations that Ms McCusker acted with a lack of integrity, or dishonestly, I consider that the weight of the findings I have made against her puts public trust and confidence in the profession at risk. SRA guidance states that public trust and confidence in the firms it regulates is at the heart of the legal system. Maintaining that trust and confidence requires controlling which non-regulated persons may be involved in legal practice and under what conditions.
